FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 8, 2024 ISSUE 395 PUBLIC RELATIONS "YOUR PARTNERS IN PUBLIC SAFETY" 705 E. 4TH ST. HOBART, IN 46342 219-942-1125 EXT. 1070 STAY WELL AND BE SAFE!

GREETINGS FROM CHIEF GARRETT CISZEWSKI'S OFFICE

Congratulations to Sgt. Ryan Snedecor for completing the Northwestern University Center for Public Safety's Executive Management Program (EMP). The EMP program brought police administrators, and mid-level public safety managers together from across the United States to examine law enforcement trends and to workshop critical issues including Crime Prevention Strategies, Ethics, Leadership and Media Relations.

Under the leadership of respected and experienced Northwestern University instructors, program participants gain advanced managerial skills for proactively responding to dynamic public safety events and meeting the most challenging of current and emerging demands.

The Hobart Police Department is proud to partner with Mayor Josh, and the Hobart Fire Department in offering our community the opportunity to learn safety skills through the courses we are offering at no cost. We hope to see you at the Self Defense Class on Friday, November 15!

International Fraud Awareness Week is observed globally in the third week of November.

This year, the event takes place from November 10 - November 16. The aim is to raise awareness of fraud through fraud prevention campaigns and education. Did you know that the Ponzi scheme was named after Charles Ponzi, who defrauded banks of about $20 million in 1920? Fraud is defined as an intentional act of deceiving someone to secure an unlawful or unfair gain. Fraud is not only financial. It also includes identity theft, voter fraud, healthcare fraud, and more. Fraud is pervasive in every area of human lives, and it's becoming more sophisticated and rewarding. Education on the other hand removes such faults from society and helps to better it visit Scholaroo a place to find scholarships to support future of you and your loved ones.

HISTORY OF INTERNATIONAL FRAUD AWARENESS WEEK Fraud is not a modern invention. Since antiquity, even before money was invented, people have been deceiving each other for personal gain. The first recorded fraud in history was carried out by a Greek merchant, Hegestratos, in 300 B.C. The merchant tried to perform an insurance fraud called bottomry, which would allow him to get a loan using his ship's floating keel and hull. The insurance had a clause that made the loan void if the ship sinks during the voyage. While trying to drown his ship, he was caught by his crew and passengers, and later drowned as he was trying to escape from them.

Fraud was widespread during the ancient Roman era, especially in the government, where senior public officials participated in thefts and fraudulent tax collection. A famous fraud scheme of that era was that of the Praetorian Guard in 193 A.D. As bodyguards to the Roman emperor, Pertinax, they had him murdered and offered the throne to the highest bidder. But the Guard had no right to the throne, and the buyer learned that at his peril.

As the Master of the Royal Mint in the 17th century, Sir Isaac Newton faced multiple challenges of fraud that kept him busy throughout his tenure. He was also a victim of the earliest, most prominent investment crashes, the South Sea Bubble. During that period, there was a startup mania ongoing, with everyone rushing to invest in one innovation or the other without understanding what they were investing in. Those ventures never floated, and people lost a fortune to the bubble.

The 18 and 19 centuries had their fair share of big fraud cases, including the Mississippi Bubble, William Duer fraud bubble that almost crashed the New York market, Ulysses S. Grant and Daniel Drew cases, and the 1929 stock market crash. These fraud cases led the U.S. government to create the Securities and Exchange Commission.

With the advent of technology, fraud became more complicated for security agencies to track. Major fraud cases of the 21st century include the FIFA bribery and corruption scandal, Bernie Madoff's Ponzi scheme, Enron scandal, and Huawei fraud case. Fraud is not only limited to individuals. Big businesses are also victims. Even the likes of Facebook and Google are not left out. As technology advances, we can definitely expect fraud to grow. Individuals, businesses, and governments will have to put measures to minimize the risks of being defrauded.

INTERNATIONAL FRAUD AWARENESS WEEK FAQs

How can I be aware of fraud? Educate yourself on the various types of fraud and the tactics - including the latest ones - that scammers or fraudsters employ to deceive people. Also, be wary of messages from unknown email addresses or persons, or calls from unknown numbers.

What do I do if I fall victim to fraud? Contact your financial institution and ensure your accounts get frozen. Document all shreds of evidence of the crime and file a report with the authorities. That can either be Action Fraud or your district attorney. Then talk to your financial advisor or a lawyer to find out what your options are.

How does a bank investigate fraud? After filing a fraud complaint with your bank, they will review the activities of your account and ask for relevant details of the fraud. Their internal fraud investigators will proceed to analyze the fraud and the origin. All these usually take 90 days, and in more complex cases, it is likely to take a longer period.

HOW TO OBSERVE INTERNATIONAL FRAUD AWARENESS WEEK

Educate your network on anti-fraud measures. If you are knowledgeable on anti-fraud measures, why not share that knowledge with your network? Even if you are not, you can easily do online research to educate yourself and share what you have learned. Who knows, your information may prevent someone from being a victim of fraud. Outline what you would like to talk about and include informative images. Then share this information by posting on Twitter or other social media platforms.

Conduct a fraud check-up for your organization. As either an employee or an employer, you should do your part in safeguarding your organization from insider or outsider fraud. That involves performing a fraud check-up to identify weak points in your organization's security and present the findings to the right people to develop a proper course of action. Check the International Fraud Awareness Week's website or any other online security resource for fraud check-up tools.

Host an International Fraud Awareness Week event. Another way you can observe International Fraud Awareness Week is to organize a seminar at your workplace or in your community. Identify the theme for the event and develop an agenda - ensure that they align to fraud awareness. Invite expert speakers and inform your coworkers or people in your community about the event details. Remember to tag International Fraud Awareness Week for them to showcase your event on their events page.
