Thanksgiving is a wonderful time to gather with friends and family, eat delicious food, watch football (or the parade!), and travel to visit loved ones. While enjoying the holiday, and as things might get hectic, it is important to always keep safety in mind.

Top safety hazards during the Thanksgiving holiday include:

- FIRE ... kitchen fires, candles and outdoor deep fryers
- FOOD ... choking and poisoning, cuts and burns during food preparation
- TRAVEL ... car accidents, driving while intoxicated or distracted

KITCHEN SAFETY

- Keep children away from the stove.
- Do not leave the house while the turkey is cooking.
- Ensure the kitchen floor is kept clear and doesn't have any trip hazards.
- Keep matches, lighters, candles and knives out of the reach of children.

Thanksgiving is the #1 day of the year for cooking fires, reports State Farm insurance. The U.S. Fire Department confirms that more than 4,000 fires occur on Thanksgiving Day and preparing deep fried turkeys, using a turkey fryer, is the cause of approximately 5 deaths, 50 injuries, and the destruction of 900 homes and more than $15 million in property damage every year. Kitchen safety is even more important than usual during busy holiday times, like Thanksgiving, when more people might be working in the kitchen to prepare a large meal. But for casual cooks and experienced chefs alike, the kitchen presents more hazards than imagined. Read more about the most common ways kitchen tasks send people to the ER every day so you can plan your next family gathering to be even safer.

HOLIDAY FIRE PREVENTION TIPS

- Keep baking soda on hand to put out kitchen fires.
- Do not leave food cooking or the stove unsupervised.
- Make sure smoke alarms are working.
- A household fire extinguisher should always be nearby.
- Do not leave candles burning unattended and do not burn candles near flammable items like curtains or potpourri.
- Follow all instructions carefully when using a deep fryer and monitor closely!

Incidents of choking and food poisoning increase during the holidays, especially around Thanksgiving, as people are preparing and consuming more food than usual. Food Safety News reports that approximately 51 million turkeys are consumed on Thanksgiving.

FOOD SAFETY

- Always wash your hands after handling raw or under-cooked poultry.
- Use separate cutting boards for raw meat and produce to prevent cross-contamination.
- The USDA recommends cooking the turkey at a minimum of 325 degrees. Use a food thermometer and cook the turkey to an internal temperature of 165 to 180 degrees to ensure the turkey is cooked thoroughly and to avoid illness caused by consuming under-cooked poultry.
- Store leftovers within 2 hours or toss them.

PET SAFETY The Veterinary Medical Association warns that turkey and chicken bones should never be given to pets because they can splinter and pets may choke.

Dogs should be kept away from any dish that has onions, leeks, garlic, raisins, grapes or chocolate, as those foods can be hazardous to your dog's health.

HOLIDAY TRAVEL SAFETY With Thanksgiving being one of the most travel-heavy times of the year, it is important to be prepared before hitting the road and to drive defensively, especially during bad weather.

Drivers who are texting take their eyes off the road for an average of 5 seconds. Driving at 55 mph, that is about the length of a football field.

- Buckle up, every trip.
- Make sure your vehicle is well maintained.
- Plan your route ahead of time.
- Carry and emergency kit in the car.
- Be aware of weather conditions.
- Take caution in parking lots while out shopping.
- No texting while driving.

According to the National Highway Safety Association, more than 40% of holiday car accidents involve alcohol. DO NOT DRINK AND DRIVE.

There's never a time when employees, parents or families can 'take a break' from safety. Workplace safety is often our focus because there may be bigger hazards present and we all want to get home safely to our families and loved ones at the end of the day, but safety at home is also important. Take a breather and remind yourself what the holidays are truly about and know that nothing is more important than having a safe holiday this year.

10 TIPS FOR SAFER ONLINE SHOPPING

Follow these tips to keep criminals out of your accounts while shopping online. The holiday season will be here before you know it, so it's time to brush up on your online shopping safety skills. From spotting shady websites to avoiding deals too good to be true, it's important to stay vigilant while you shop. For example, the Better Business Bureau recently warned consumers about a new "card declined scam." Here's how it works: After you enter your credit or debit card number to pay for an online purchase, an error message appears, stating your payment method has been declined and urging you to try a different card. Confused, you enter a different card number but receive the same error message. What's going on? If you call your bank to ask about the errors, the representative will probably inform you that you've been charged more for your purchase than anticipated. Yep, it's that easy to become a scam victim. Below are basic guidelines for avoiding incidents like this and other ways to keep yourself safe online.

- 1. Only Shop on Popular or Familiar Websites Search results can be rigged to lead you astray or even infect your device with malware. A good deal isn't worth the risk when we all know Amazon carries everything under the sun. Likewise, almost every major retail outlet, from Target to Best Buy to Home Depot, has an online store. Beware of misspellings or sites using a different top-level domain (.io instead of .com, for example)—those are the oldest tricks in the book. Yes, sales on these sites might look enticing, but that's how they trick you into giving up your info.
- 2. When in Doubt, Look for the Lock If you're unsure if the site you're buying from is legit, look at your browser's address bar. Never buy anything online from a site that doesn't display a lock icon near the URL. The lock icon indicates that the site has SSL (secure sockets layer) encryption installed. This means your data transfers are more secure than they are on an unencrypted site. Another way to tell if a site has SSL is to look for a URL that starts with https://, which is standard, even on non-shopping sites. Google Chrome flags any page without the extra S as "not secure," so a site without it should stand out even more.
- 3. Research the Seller Before Buying If you're wary of a site, perform your due diligence and look them up before you shop. The Better Business Bureau has an online directory and a scam tracker. Yelp and Google are packed with retailer reviews. Put companies through the wringer before you plunk down your credit card number. There's a reason that non-delivery/non-payment is the most common cybercrime complaint: it hurts when that happens, financially and emotionally. That said—online reviews can be gamed. If you see nothing but positive feedback and can't tell if the writers are legitimate customers, follow your instincts. If nothing else, make sure you have a concrete address and a working phone number for the seller. If things go bad, you have a place to take your complaint. In fact, call them before you order so you can clarify a return policy and where to go with any issues after the purchase.
- 4. Lie or Omit Personal Information on Shopping Forms There is no reason an online retailer needs to know your birthday, middle name, Social Security number, or any other personal information beyond your payment method and mailing address. Feel free to lie if a retailer requires you to fill in that data to complete your transaction. What are they going to do? Tell on you? The more scammers know about you, the easier it is to steal your identity. When possible, default to giving up as little personal data as possible. Major sites get breached all the time, so keep your information private.
- 5. Don't Use Your Debit Card to Shop Online If your debit card is compromised, scammers can access your bank account directly. Instead, use a credit card or mobile payment app when shopping online. Some banks offer disposable credit card numbers to make online shopping even safer, as do some security services like IronVest. The Fair Credit Billing Act ensures that you are only responsible for up to $50 of credit card charges you didn't authorize if you get scammed. Most reputable card issuers won't hold you responsible for any unauthorized charges at all. Most banks will also return any cash stolen by identity theft, but they often have to perform an investigation, and it could take days or weeks to get your money back, compared with minutes for a credit card. Regularly review the electronic statements for your credit card, debit card, and checking accounts. If you see something wrong, pick up the phone to address the matter quickly. In the case of credit cards, pay the bill only when you know all your charges are accurate. You have 30 days to notify the bank or card issuer of problems; however, you might be liable for the charges anyway.
- 6. Pay With Your Phone in Stores Paying for items using your smartphone has become pretty standard in brick-and-mortar stores and is more secure than using your credit card. Using a mobile payment app like Apple Pay or Google Pay means you've authenticated your identity using your device, so no one else can claim to be you and steal your data or money. Plus, you avoid card skimmers.
- 7. Watch Out for Fraudulent Gift Card Exchanges When it comes to gift cards, stick to the source when you buy one. Scammers like to auction off gift cards on sites like eBay with little or no funds on them. Alternatively, the many gift card "exchanges" out there are a great idea—they let you trade away cards you don't want for the cards you do—but you can't trust everyone else using such a service. You might get a card and find it's already been used. Make sure the site you're using has a rock-solid guarantee policy. Better yet, go directly to a retail brick-and-mortar store to get the physical card, or buy electronic gift cards issued by the retailer, sent directly to your recipient.
- 8. Stay Private While Using Public Wi-Fi If you're shopping via a public hotspot, stick to known networks, even if they're free, like those found at Starbucks or Barnes & Noble. You should probably also use a virtual private network (VPN) to be safe (here's why). For more, see our tips for public Wi-Fi hotspot security.
- 9. Install and Use Security Apps Use a password manager to create uncrackable passwords and passkeys. It will keep track of them and fill them in as you shop. You can also save time filling out mailing address forms by storing that info in your password manager and letting it enter the data for you at checkout. It's also a good idea to protect all your devices against malware with regular updates to your antivirus program. Better yet, consider a full security suite, which will have antivirus software and will also fight spam, delete spear-phishing emails, and prevent phishing attacks from websites (the latter two try and steal your info by mimicking a message or site that looks legit). Consider installing an ad blocker extension on your favorite browser, too. An ad blocker not only cleans up your browsing experience by eliminating annoying or intrusive banner and popup advertising but also blocks trackers that monitor your browsing activity. Finally, enable multi-factor authentication for all of your online accounts. An authenticator app makes this incredibly easy, or you can use a hardware security key. Remember, it's not enough to have this stuff installed. Make sure your security tools are always up to date. Otherwise, any new threats can get to your devices—and there are always new threats.
- 10. If You Do Get Scammed, Don't Get Mad, Get Revenge Don't be embarrassed if you get taken for a ride while online shopping. Instead, make a bit of scene—online, of course. Complain to the seller. If you don't get satisfaction, report the incident to the Federal Trade Commission, your state's attorney general, or even the FBI. That will probably work best if you buy in the US rather than from foreign sites or international dropshippers. If you're going to get scammed, try to get scammed locally...or at least domestically.
